Crucial Catch program has wide impact and is the first time the ACS award has been given nation-wide. $125,000 over a two-year period was awarded to Cambridge Health Alliance, an academic health care system that provides care for underserved populations, particularly those living in low-income communities. The grant was made possible through a collaboration between the ACS, NFL, and the league’s Crucial Catch campaign.

The ACS, a national cancer society that works to reduce cancer’s impact and burden, made the grant award possible through a unique partnership with the NFL.

Cambridge Health Alliance will receive $125,000 Grant from ACS, NFL and Patriots as part of the ACS’s Community Foundation initiative. The ACS, NFL and the league’s Crucial Catch program have awarded a grant to Cambridge Health Alliance (CHA) to address lung cancer mortality by increasing screenings and supporting smoking cessation efforts. The grant funding was made possible through a collaboration between the ACS, NFL, and the league’s Crucial Catch campaign.

The grants are the latest in ACS’s Community Health Advocates Implementing National Grants Initiative for Empowerment and Equity program, which provides funding opportunities as part of the ACS’s community-building efforts to reduce health disparities. CHA, an academic health care system that provides care for underserved populations, is one of the recipients. The grant will be used to increase access to care for patients who are uninsured or underinsured.

Cranberries: Authentically American treat on the turkey table since 1621

It’s the only real thing on the table at Thanksgiving, but the superfruit that is authentically American has a list more going for it than it’s bright red color on Thanksgiving.

Cranberries are a great resource for New England, and are the largest cash crop in Massachusetts. Though Wisconsin grows the most cranberries in the country by number, the superfruit is vitally important to this state’s agricultural industry. With cranberries being such a vital part of the Thanksgiving table, that means the season is vitally important to the cranberry industry here — an industry that booms in the fall months mostly on the South Shore and towards Cape Cod.

Ocean Spray officials, who are based in Carver on the South Shore, said Thanksgiving accounts for 37 percent of annual cranberry sales — basically between Thanksgiving and Nov. 30.

There are a number of things that the cranberry can provide for the Thanksgiving table. Obviously, Cranberry farmers harvesting a fresh crop of the berries on the South Shore say fall, just in time for Thanksgiving. The superfruit is one of only three cultivated fruits native to North America and one that is typically grown in the northeast. That is one reason that cranberries were believed to be on the first Thanksgiving table, and why they remain there to this day.

City leaders kick-off Census 2020 efforts early to ease concerns

The City and a Complete Count Committee kicked off the Census efforts for Chelsea on Saturday, Nov. 16, in an effort to get the message out early and often to those in the community that might be hesitant or unwilling to fill out the Census 2020.Census.

By order of the U.S. Constitution, the U.S. Department of Commerce is required every 10 years to do a full count to the extent possible of every person in the United States as of April 1.

In Chelsea during the past several decades, the City has been shown undercounted in its official population due to people not filling out or responding to the Census. Because federal funding relies upon Census counts, that undercounting has resulted in Chelsea losing millions of dollars in federal funds over the past several decades, which would go to the schools and for street/ sidewalk repairs as community block grants.

Chelsea has been, historically, one of the most difficult communities to count accurately in the state — primarily due to language barriers and hesitancy to participate by the immigrant community.

“We need to start early and try to anticipate concerns and address them and promote what the Census is and why it’s important,” said Cate Fox-Lent, the liaison to the Census for the City of Chelsea. “We know there will be people with lots of questions and concerns about whether they are eligible and if it’s safe.”

To help with that, the City has formed a Complete Count Committee with 80 local leaders from faith communities, non-profits, community centers, schools, and advisory boards. The hope is that these local leaders, who already have the trust of groups that are eligible and if it’s safe.”

“City leaders are working hard to convey how important it is to participate by the immigrant community.”

The City Council passed two orders Monday night that essentially set the property tax rates for Fiscal Year 2020, but one Councilor did attempt to hold the line on tax increases, raising questions about how the Assessor Department values larger properties in the community.

Due to the property tax increases, the maximum allowable increase in property tax rates along with the 31 percent residential property tax exemption for Chelsea homeowners who live in the city. With those votes, the residential property tax rate will be $13.46 per $1,000 of valuation, while the commercial property tax rate would be set at $27.18.

While both these rates are lower than they were for FY19, there will be an increase in the average tax bills because of the recent revelation of Chelsea properties that saw assessed property values increase across the board.

But before the orders were ultimately passed, Councilor-at-Large Roy Avellaneda introduced an amendment calling for a zero percent increase in property tax rates alongside the 31 percent residential property tax exemption, essentially cutting $3.7 million that would have been raised by the proposed 2.125 percent increase in property taxes.

Avellaneda noted that there was nothing in either order introduced by Ambrico that called for the 2.125 percent increase, the maximum allowable increase. With the increase, property taxes would rise just over 1 percent.

crab maple is a fruit tree, but not everyone can agree on the differences between the two species. While some argue that the crab maple is a true maple, others say that it is a cross between a maple and a hickory. To further complicate matters, there is evidence to suggest that the crab maple may actually be a hybrid of two different species, the sugar maple and the rock maple. This uncertainty makes it difficult to accurately describe the crab maple's appearance and characteristics. However, what is clear is that the crab maple produces edible fruit, which is known as crab apples or crab berries.

Another interesting aspect of the crab maple is its cultural significance. In the past, the crab maple was an important food source for many Native American tribes. The berries were used to make a variety of dishes, including pies and jellies. In addition to its culinary value, the crab maple has also been associated with various cultural beliefs and practices. For example, in some Native American cultures, the crab maple was believed to have medicinal properties and was used to treat a variety of ailments.

Overall, the crab maple is a fascinating tree with many different characteristics and uses. Its berries are delicious and nutritious, and it has played an important role in many cultures throughout history. However, it is important to note that the crab maple's scientific classification is still not fully understood, and more research is needed to fully explore its potential uses and benefits.
Happy Thanksgiving

Thanksgiving is a uniquely American holiday, tracing its origins back to the historic Plymouth dinner before there was even a thought of a United States of America. Thanksgiving is the ultimate family-centered holiday. It has no religious meaning, no national commemorations, and no required gift giving. It lacks the commercialization, relativity, solemnity, and political overtones of any of our other national observances.

It's a day for schools, family gatherings, and not much else to do other than enjoy a great dinner with those whom we love and care about. It is a day many of us consider to be a collective reflection on what we have in our lives which can lead to tragedies. Alcohol abuse by a family member often express themselves in drinking too much, which in turn can lead to one-half, and third to one-half, and up to 56% of those with a family member who is alcohol abusing or dependent.

Even in this time of divisiveness in our country, we all must come together and thank each other for what it truly is a relief to have a day when we can just shut up and enjoy having the company of our family and friends.

Thanksgiving serves as a rare day for reflection, relaxation, and inevitably—at least for some of us—a post-dinner nap or early night of sleep. In a time when so many of us are connected 24/7 to some instrument of communication, it is remarkably fortunate to be where Americans are remarkably fortunate to be where we are, and not much else to do other than enjoy a great dinner with those whom we love and care about. We wish all of our readers a happy—and restful—Thanksgiving.

SECOND ANNUAL FRIENDSGIVING COMMUNITY EVENT
A BUDDING TRADITION

Madelyn Garcia Real Estate and the Chelsea Rotary Club presented Chelsea’s second Annual Friendsgiving Community Event on Nov. 24 at the real estate agency. Kayem donated a delivery truck and transported the frozen poultry during the rainy Sunday morning. Volunteers from Madelyn Garcia Real Estate, the Chelsea Rotary Club, the Chelsea High School football team, Chelsea Girl Scouts, and Chelsea Police presented 200 Thanksgiving turkeys, pies, and other treats to families in the community, who enjoyed pastries, coffee, and lunch during their visit.

“We collected donations from a lot of local businesses. It’s amazing how people come together,” said Madelyn Garcia, Chelsea Rotary Club Sergeant in Arms. “We hope that we make this a tradition. There are a lot of different levels of enjoyment during the holidays. Putting something together like this unites the community. It turned out perfect.”

It was a festive night for all who attended The Sports Museum’s 18th Annual Celebration of The Tradition. The TD Garden floor was covered with dasher to cover what with Executive Director of The Sports Museum, Rusty Sullivan described as “the largest turnout and biggest fund-raiser to date. Sullivan has been Executive Director of 14 of the 18 years that this annual event has been presented. It was Sullivan who made the opening remarks, which signaled the start of the presentations to the 2019 – The Tradition honorees in their sport – Zdeno Chara (hockey), Manny Ramirez (baseball), Matt Lijff (football), Michelle Kwan (figure skating), and Ben Crenshaw (golf).

The initial award was presented to Chara by former Bruins captain and Hockey Hall of Famer Johnny Bucyk. Chara, still playing solid hockey at the age of 42, explained some details about how he has been able to play at the superior defensive level for so long. When asked by Tradition co-host Jackie MacMullan about his legendary work ethic, Chara went on to describe the key element, which contains his extensive defensive mental toughness. “I’ve been very lucky that we have a family history of my dad being a Great Dane skater, and my mom did some amateur-level skating. My dad was obviously a big influence, he taught me a lot about training, about keeping track of when and where I want to be, and how to get to certain goals. He told me the best way to do it is to keep track of your workouts, making sure that you know what you are doing, and finding your patterns that work for you. It became a habit, and at the same time I was working these workouts and trying to do better next time, or next week, or so on. It was also a motivation, but over the course of 25-plus years, it’s a big stack of papers.”

In an interview prior to the presentations, Chara stated, “It’s a very huge honor, humble and grateful that I could be here with such a great group of athletes.” He went on to elaborate, “I’m very thankful to join this group. It’s always nice to interact with them and talk about their teams, as we spend so much time with our season.”

The other 2019 honorees on the roster were, Manny Ramirez – Won two World Series in seven-plus seasons with the Red Sox. He finished his major league career in 2008, including 274 with the Red Sox (presented by Manny Delcarmen); Matt Lijff – Played 16 seasons in the NFL, including four with the Celtics, with whom he won two of his three NBA titles (presented by former Globe sports columnist Bob Ryan); Michelle Kwan – Retired figure skater is a two-time Olympic medalist (silver in 1998, bronze in 2002), a five-time world champion and nine-time US champion (presenter Brian Bolland); and Ben Crenshaw – Who won 19 events on the PGA Tour, captured the 1999 US Ryder Cup team that regained the Cup at The Country Club in Brookline (present– Brad Faxon).

Upon his eventual retirement, Chara should be among those players considered for Hockey Hall of Fame selections. To date, his 22nd season in the NHL, 14 of them with the Bruins, he has provided this town with success that has included three trips to the Stanley Cup Final, including a Cup win in 2011, along with the excitement his solid play brings to Boston’s blue line.

HAPPY THANKSGIVING
From the Staff of the CHELSEA RECORD
Firefighters are busier on Thanksgiving Day than any other day of the year because this has been the case for 87% of the fires in Massachusetts over the last five years. A Fire Marshal in the Commonwealth's Office of Fire Marshal said the state is already seeing an increase in the number of fires in the state. The state fire marshal said the increase in the number of fires is being attributed to distractions like using electronic devices while driving.

There are several reasons why distractions have increased. One reason is that cell phones are now in the hands of more people than ever before. This has led to an increase in the number of drivers who are using their cell phones while driving. Another reason is that more people are using electronic devices while driving, such as laptops and tablet computers.

The new law permits the use of hands-free devices while driving, which is a big change from the past. In the past, drivers were not allowed to use electronic devices while driving, and they were required to pull over to the side of the road if they wanted to use their devices.

The new law also includes a provision that requires drivers to turn off their cell phones while driving. This provision is intended to reduce the risk of accidents caused by distracted driving.

In addition, the new law includes provisions that require drivers to turn off their cell phones when they are in a school zone or a construction zone. This is intended to reduce the risk of accidents caused by distracted driving in these areas.

The new law also includes provisions that require drivers to turn off their cell phones when they are in a busy area, such as a shopping center or a mall. This is intended to reduce the risk of accidents caused by distracted driving in these areas.

The new law also includes provisions that require drivers to turn off their cell phones when they are in a rural area, such as a country road or a back road. This is intended to reduce the risk of accidents caused by distracted driving in these areas.

In conclusion, the new law is a significant change from the past and will help to reduce the risk of accidents caused by distracted driving. It is important for drivers to follow the new law and to avoid using their cell phones while driving.

Governor signs ban on driving while talking or texting on cell phone

In 90 days unless you get a ticket, drivers in Massachusetts will have other hands free options inside their vehicles. Drivers must put cell phones in an area that is out of reach while driving. The new law also makes exceptions for drivers who are using the phone for a call while driving.

The new law is being praised by safety officials. "This legislation will help to reduce the risk of accidents caused by distracted driving," said one safety official. "It is important for drivers to follow the new law and to avoid using their cell phones while driving."
CHA staff honored by Metro Boston EMS Council

Joshua Mularella, DO, was honored at the Metropolitan Boston EMS Council’s annual awards ceremony on November 27. Dr. Mularella, who has been with the Chelsea Army National Guard, was honored for his outstanding contributions to the organization.

The awards were presented to individuals who have made significant contributions to the development of EMS services. The award recognizes the importance of EMS professionals who provide care in emergency situations.

Dr. Mularella has been with the Chelsea Army National Guard for several years and is recognized for his dedication to providing excellent care to patients in need. His commitment to the profession and his leadership skills are highly regarded by his colleagues.

The ceremony was held in Chelsea, MA, and featured speeches from Dr. Mularella and other prominent figures in the field of emergency medical services. The event was well attended and provided an opportunity for EMS professionals to come together and celebrate their achievements.

In addition to Dr. Mularella, several other professionals were honored for their contributions to the development of EMS services.

The Metropolitan Boston EMS Council is a non-profit organization that works to improve emergency medical care in the region. It is dedicated to the development of high-quality EMS services, and the organization is committed to ensuring that all communities have access to the care they need.

The ceremony was a success and provided an opportunity for EMS professionals to come together and celebrate their achievements. The event was well attended and provided an opportunity for EMS professionals to come together and celebrate their achievements.
